A. American College of Osteopathic Obstetricians and Gynecologists (OMED). Philadelphia, PA. October 5th – October 8th 2017; Jacqueline Macy McNabb [Page 7]

- a. Requesting $743.02. As of last year, LMU-DCOM has been nationally affiliated with the American College of Osteopathic Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOOG) through their National Student Society. Each year, each school has to have at least one student representative attend their Fall Conference and serve as the delegate for the year for the school to be affiliated with ACOOG. Through this affiliation, our Women's Health club receives grants ($1,000 last year), visiting professors, national support, etc. Macy served as the ACOOG representative for DCOM last year and is the representative again this year. This is a national position and is important to help get DCOM recognized among major organizations and residency programs. She is also the only student who is able to attend this year due to the first and second year schedules. She will also be attending the American Congress of Obstetricians and Gynecologists Jr. Fellow Day on Friday before the ACOOG events start Friday afternoon. She believes she will be receiving $400 from Women's Health Club.
